Everybody's Talking!

Hotel of Doom: Construction on a 105-story hotel in Pyongyang, the capital of North Korea, began in 1987. It's just being completed now. That's because construction stood still for 20 years when the country suffered an economic crisis. The partially built pyramid-shaped building became an eyesore and an embarrassment and was dubbed the "worst building in the history of mankind" by Esquire magazine. There is new hope, however, because Orascom Telecom, an Egyptian company, has begun to work on the building. Kato Wittwer, chief executive, explains that the building is expected to be partially open soon with 150 rooms on the top floor being used as hotel rooms.

Too short: Nearly half of the female students who attended the homecoming dance at Stansbury High School in Stansbury Park, Utah (US), got a nasty surprise when they arrived. They were told by school officials that they couldn't come inside because their dresses were too short. Angry students signed a petition calling for a change to the dress code, and girls later wore their dresses to class in protest. Ultimately, principal Kendall Topham apologized to the students, explaining that the dress code was too vague to enforce properly and that there was never any intention to leave students heartbroken. He promised them another dance to make up for things.

Different approach: When airlines go through their pre-flight safety instructions, many people on board don't bother to listen. But passengers on Air New Zealand are likely to take notice because the airline is using characters from the popular book "The Hobbit" in its four-minute safety video titled "An Unexpected Briefing," which is a takeoff on the movie "The Hobbit: An Unexpected Journey." The movie was filmed in New Zealand and many travelers come to the country to see the landscape shown in the film. This safety movie features elves, hobbits, Orcs and even the creature, Gollum, representing passengers and crew on the aircraft.

Busy hero: Gus Hertz is one busy and heroic guy. While on vacation with his family in St. Petersburg, Florida (US), he rescued three people in two separate incidents that occurred over the course of two days. In the first incident, he pulled a man from his car after it ran off the road, ending up in water. The next day, he pulled two people from an ultralight plane that had crashed into the water. Hertz, the father of three young children, is quite modest and claims he simply did what anyone would do in the same situations.

Did You Know...

Special spread: Those wanting an alternative to mayonnaise can try a trademarked product called Grapeseed Vegenaise, which was developed in the 1970s. It does not contain dairy, eggs or animal products, so is fine for both vegetarians and vegans.

Top songs: Some of the all-time top 100 songs from August 1958 to July 2008 as listed by Billboard magazine's Hot 100 include "The Twist" (Chubby Checker, 1960), "Mack the Knife" (Bobby Darin, 1959), "Physical" (Olivia Newton-John, 1981), "You Light Up My Life" (Debbie Boone, 1977)
and "Hey Jude" (The Beatles, 1968).

No air: Most climbers of Mount Everest in Nepal carry oxygen tanks because the air is so thin at the top. However, people do climb this peak without oxygen. The first to do so were Reinhold Messner of Italy and Peter Habeler of Austria in 1978.

Expensive clothes: An auction of Hollywood memorabilia fetched some incredibly high prices. For example, the dress worn by actress Judy Garland in "The Wizard of Oz" raised $480,000, while the dress Julie Andrews donned in "The Sound of Music" sold for $38,400.

On the Lighter Side
